DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. Claims 1, 4-6, 8-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 11-170319.

JP '319 teaches an injection molding machine with a motor and brake unit 16, the brake unit includes an electromagnet 35, the brake unit also having a hollow output shaft, see Figure 6, element 106.

JP '319 fails to specifically teach a brake torque greater than

However, one of ordinary skill in the art would recognize the need for the brake unit to generate greater torque over the torque provided by the motor such that it would sufficiently brake the motor and drive unit.

4. Claims 2 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 11-170319 as applied to claims 1, 4-6, and 8-13 above, and further in view of JP 2003-117970.

JP '319 fails to teach the controllers.

JP '970 shows the use of controllers for an electromagnetic brake used in an injection molding machine, the brakes being controlled according to the time sequence, see Figure 3. It would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to modify JP '319 with a controller taught by JP '970 that allows for exact timing for control of the brakes and for the operation of the machine.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claim 3 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

6. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The prior art of record fails to teach an injection molding unit with a motor having a brake unit that also drives the ejector apparatus, the ejector apparatus having a return spring to bias the ejector pin opposite the direction the ejector pin is projected, the brake unit generating the torque greater than the biasing force of the return spring.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
